Clifton D. Gardner, a native of York Springs, dropped over dead at his home in Carlisle on Sunday morning. Just as he arose from his bed he was attacked with heart trouble and fell to the floor, expiring at once. His age was 81 years. Mr. Gardner was a son of the late John Gardner and was born in York Springs where he spent most of his life. He followed the trade of butchering for many years and later clerked in the store formerly owned by C. W. Gardner, in that town. About ten years ago Mr. Gardner moved to Carlisle. He was married to Miss Mary Wanner, a daughter of the late Rev. Wanner, York Springs, and she survives him, together with a 12-year-old daughter, Mildred Gardner. These brothers also survive: E. Kenton Gardner of York Springs, and William M. Gardner and Park Gardner of Pittsburgh. George L. Deardorff, Latimore township, is an uncle of the deceased, and Register and Recorder Charles W. Gardner of Gettysburg is a cousin. The funeral was on Wednesday, interment in York Springs Cemetery.

Samuel A. Cooley died Thursday morning of last week at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Mervin Black, in Menallen township. Mr. Cooley had been ill for some time as the result of a stroke of apoplexy, but his death was caused by kidney trouble. He was 80 years, 8 months and 22 days old. Mr. Cooley served two enlistments of nine months each in the Civil War. He was the last surviving member of the family of David Cooley, who for a number of years lived near to Ground Oak Church. Miss Elizabeth Minter died at the home of her sister, Mrs. N. H. Muselman, East Middle street, Thursday of last week, after an illness of long duration, aged 56 years, 9 months and 22 days. She leaves two brothers and a sister, George W. Minter of Arendtsville, Jacob C. Minter of Cashtown, Mrs. N. H. Muselman of Gettysburg. She was a daughter of the late Adam W. and Hannah M. Minter and was born in Arendtsville where she spent her early life, later residing near Cashtown, and coming to Gettysburg about five years ago. Funeral was held on Saturday, services by Rev. J. B. Baker, interment in Evergreen Cemetery.

Harp William Fisher, a prominent young farmer of Germany township, died very suddenly at his home near Littlestown on Tuesday aged 33 years, 10 months and 7 days. Death was caused by ulcers of the stomach and brain pressure. He was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Fisher of Hanover, formerly of near Littlestown. He is survived by his wife and three children, Anna Gertrude, aged 11, Gordon Francis, 9, and J. Merritt, 3 years old. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Alfred Fisher, of Hanover, and two sisters, Mrs. A. John J. Dukehart, a life-long resident of Emmitsburg, died suddenly at his home in that place on Tuesday. The cause of his death

A Good Cause.

An event in which every citizen and resident of our community should be interested, will take place on Monday, August 16. On this date the Fire Department of this city have secured for two benefit performances, the celebrated Welsh Brothers' London Hippodrome combined. This show is well and favorably known to all lovers of tented shows, as being the best of its kind on the road. It is an organization of twenty-five years existence. This season, the Welsh Brothers claim to have the biggest and best outfit that they have ever carried as they will present nothing but all star acts selected from an army of circus stars. The Firemen should be well patronized for their efforts in securing this monster aggregation of amusement, and no doubt the citizens will, as they certainly should, show their appreciation and gratitude by purchasing tickets in large quantities and give the "Fire Ladies" a rousing send-off as the larger the crowd the more money will be given to the Fire Company. Tickets are now on sale and can be purchased from any member of the Fire Department. The price of admission has been placed within reach of all, and 25 cents will secure a general admission ticket and 50 cents a ticket with a coupon attached which will entitle the holder to a reserved seat. Remember that the date will be Monday, August 16, and two performances will be given, rain or shine.

Cobean Corner Sold.

George F. Eberhart has purchased from the Cobean heirs the corner property at Washington and Chambersburg streets. Possession will be given October 1st and Mr. Eberhart is making plans to erect on the lot after October 1st a fine new garage that will cover the entire lot 57 x 180 feet and will connect with his present garage. The two buildings now on the lot will be torn down. That part of the new garage facing on Chambersburg street will be two or three stories high and run back 25 feet. The front will be white glazed terra cotta. A large room on the corner will have a glass front and side and will be used as a display room. There will be an entrance to the garage on Chambersburg street and ladies' waiting and rest rooms will be built and equipped on the second floor of the front building. The garage proper will be built of brick with steel frame and be fire proof. It will have a capacity of 100 cars or with the present building there will be a total capacity of storing 150 cars in the garage.

Pa. Memorial to be Repaired.

The Pennsylvania Memorial Arch is receiving needed repairs. The contract for the repointing of the memorial has been given to Charles Kappes and he is filling in the joints with a material that is water-proof and prevents damage from frost and thaws. Repairs to the dome will be made with hot asphalt poured into the crevices between the granite facing and the concrete base to prevent water leaking into the building, staining it and endangering it. Charles Lady has the contract to replace the concrete lining to the interior walls and stairway which had fallen out. It is to be hoped that the work of disintegration already begun on this monument will be effectively stopped and that the people of this State in visiting need not feel ashamed of its condition.

Location for Poultry Show.

The Adams County Poultry Show will be held in the Bream and Shearer Garage, York street. The garage is excellently located and should by reason of location receive a record attendance. Mr. O. C. Rice, secretary of the Biglerville Association, has looked the garage over and says it will furnish accommodations for 1500 birds, a larger exhibit than made at Biglerville any year. The exhibit is expected to be much larger than any held at Biglerville by reason of the shipping facilities, the birds will be received and returned quickly in any direction sent and when show was held at Biglerville, shipment involved change at Gettysburg when sent South or East and this change had deterred many shipments.

No Lincoln Highway Change.

No change has been made in the route of the Lincoln Highway and none will be made. The report that the route had been diverted from York and that the Maryland route is to be followed to Gettysburg is officially denied by the Lincoln Highway Association. It is explained that the route to Washington is only a Lincoln Highway feeder instead of an actual Lincoln Highway and that it has been marked incorrectly, which led to the false impression. This, however, is to be corrected.

Picnic.

St. Francis Xavier Catholic picnic will be held at Rosensteel's pavilion at Round Top on Wednesday, August 11. There will be the usual features with a ten cent round trip ticket by the trolley.

In the Summer Clearance Sale 15 Doz. Ladies' Swiss Ribbed Union Suits, low neck, no sleeves, umbrellas knee length, lace trimmed, 38 cts. 331-21 G. W. Weaver & Son.

PAVED STREETS NEARER HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT APPROVES PAVING OF 6 SQUARES.

Attitude of Trolley Company is Asked as to Payment of Its Share of Costs.

The paving of Chambersburg street from Eagle Hotel to Centre Square and Baltimore street from Centre Square to Steinwehr avenue has advanced a step nearer the actual beginning of the work. The endorsement of the county commissioners has been approved by the State Highway Department. This means that the Highway Department will do the work and that one-half of the sixteen foot road will be charged to that part of the appropriation set apart by the Department for State aid road. The other half of the road will be paid by the town and collected from the abutting property owners and the remaining part of the streets will be paved and cost thereof collected from the Gettysburg Railway Company. The franchise giving this railway by the borough providing that the road between the tracks and two feet on either side will be built by the company. The State Highway Department will send engineers here to get data from which to make specifications and advertise for bids.

The action of the Department was reported by Councilman Gilbert to the Town Council at a special meeting on Tuesday evening and the Borough Attorney was instructed to prepare the necessary ordinances that the work of paving might go ahead without delay. He was also instructed to confer with officers of the Gettysburg Railway Company and ascertain their attitude as to the proposed paving. Council fixed a meeting for Friday evening of this week to consider ordinances, and other matters as to the paving.

A communication was received as to macadamizing Broadway according to the understanding made last year. The parts of the agreement to be done by Martin Winter, and property owners on Broadway have been completed so that the time has arrived for the borough to do its part. In the discussion that followed the Council thought it would be wise to wait until the paving of Chambersburg and Baltimore streets had started when the stone could be had from these streets to macadamize Broadway.

Councilman Baughman moved that three concrete crossings in the Third ward be built, two at intersection of Washington and High streets and one on Breckenridge street. The motion was amended so that the work would be started about a month later and carried.

R. F. Topper, Esq., representing eastern end citizens, called attention to the horrible condition of Rock Creek. No action was taken.

The Highway Committee reported that a number of property owners have not paid their shares or concrete curbs and motion prevailed that if these claims were not paid promptly to turn them over to an attorney for collection.

The following ordinance regulating guides and soliciting for hotels and garages was passed:

An Ordinance

Regulating soliciting for garages, hotels, boarding houses and for employment as Battlefield Guides within the Borough of Gettysburg, and providing penalties for the violation thereof.

Be it enacted and ordained by the Burgess and Town Council of the Borough of Gettysburg, and it is hereby enacted and ordained by authority of the same:

Sec. 1. That no person or persons shall solicit on the streets, highways, alleys, public squares, pavements, foot-walks, gutters, crossings or other public places within the Borough of Gettysburg for a garage or garages, hotel or hotels, boarding houses, or for the purpose of securing employment as a Battlefield Guide except as hereinafter provided.

Sec. 2. That no person shall solicit on the streets, highways, alleys, public squares, pavements, foot-walks, gutters, crossings or other public places, within the Borough of Gettysburg for the purpose of securing employment as a Battlefield Guide unless licensed to solicit as such Battlefield Guide by the Borough of Gettysburg, which license shall be issued by the Burgess upon the payment of a license fee of One Dollar, and which license shall be valid for one year from the date of issue, unless sooner revoked by said Burgess: Provided, however, that said license shall be issued only to such persons as shall have received written permission from the Gettysburg National Military Park Commission to act as guides over the battlefield of Gettysburg: and, Provided further, that in the event that permission to act as a battlefield guide shall be withdrawn by the Gettysburg National Military Park Commission the license of the Borough of Gettysburg shall be immediately revoked.

Sec. 3. That no person, persons, or licensed battlefield guides shall solicit on the streets, highways, alleys, public squares, gutters or crossings, within the Borough of Gettysburg for a garage or garages, hotel or hotels, boarding house or boarding houses, or for the purpose of securing employment as a battlefield guide, but shall confine themselves strictly to the pavements, and only to such pavements, whether Borough pavements or otherwise, where the owners or occupants of the property abutting thereon do not object to such soliciting by the person so soliciting.

Sec. 4. Any person violating any of the provisions of this ordinance shall on conviction thereof before the Burgess or any Justice of the Peace, forfeit and pay a fine not exceeding $10.00 and costs, to be collected as such fines and costs are now by law recoverable.

Lightning Sets Church on Fire.

The St. John's Lutheran Church, located about a half mile from Littlestown on the road leading to Taneytown, was completely destroyed by fire originating from a bolt of lightning that struck the belfry during the storm that passed over that section of the county at 6 o'clock Monday evening. With the exception of a few pews, the pulpit furniture and one small organ the contents of the church went up in flames. The loss is estimated at $6,000, with $3,000 insurance.

The bolt of lightning which brought destruction to the church is said to have been the only electrical disturbance experienced during the storm. Persons who reside in the immediate vicinity of the church, saw the bolt hit the steeple and immediately sent a call for the Littlestown Fire Department. The firemen responded but were greatly handicapped by the lack of water. They however fought the flames with small hand extinguishers.

The firemen remained in the building until the heavy bell in the tower crashed through the ceiling of the church into the auditorium. The flames fanned by the draft through the large opening spread rapidly to the interior and completely gutted the edifice. The Rev. I. M. Lau, pastor of the congregation, who was one of the first on the scene, aided by nearly 500 neighbors worked hard to save the furniture and contents of the building. The Rev. Mr. Lau, on his arrival, rushed to the pulpit and grasped the Bible and a piece of furniture which he moved to a place of safety.

When the blaze got beyond the control of the firemen they turned their attention to the surrounding property which for a time was threatened. By ten o'clock the four charred walls of the church were standing and the surrounding buildings were out of danger.

The church was a brick structure, covered by a slate roof and contained one room, which was 40 by 60 feet. It was built in 1874 and is the third erected by the congregation, which is more than a century and a half old. The congregation, it is said, is the oldest in this section of the State. The church was remodeled about three years ago, when new pews were purchased, the floors recarpeted, new pulpit furniture installed and the interior redecorated. The new steeple was built at this time and the church rededicated in November, 1913.

The congregation is made up of about 300 members, and the Rev. Lau, the pastor, was appointed to the charge about two years ago. A meeting of the congregation has been called for Saturday, Aug. 7th and will be held at the grove at the church at 4:30. If weather is inclement the meeting will be held on next Wednesday at the same time and place. A full attendance of the congregation is urged as the matter on a new church edifice will be submitted to the congregation.

School of Methods.

Hereafter the summer meeting for teachers will be known as a School of Methods and the meeting this year will cover Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Aug. 19, 20 and 21. The attendance at the summer meeting has always been very large, frequently 80 per cent. of the teachers attending and County Superintendent H. Milton Roth is arranging a program for the School of Methods that will be very helpful to teachers and beginners in taking up the work of teaching. Prominent educators are being secured by Prof. Roth, experts on methods and the young teacher will have every opportunity to find out the right way to go at the work and will absorb the enthusiasm of this getting together for mutual help in school work. The first two days of the meeting will be given to methods and the third day to the general work of the year.

All the schools in county will open on August 31 except two, Berwick township and Biglerville, they will open Sept. 5. In Union township a new brick school house has been built on site of old one destroyed by fire at Chestnut Hill. The new building has one large assembly room with cloak and wash rooms and vestibule to main room and followed the construction lines provided by the State authorities. In Abbottstown an annex has been built for the use of the High School and is expected to be ready for use when term opens.

Most Successful Assembly.

The Lutheran Summer Assembly on Friday closed the most successful session ever held. The attendance far surpassed previous assemblies and at a business meeting it was decided to hold the 1916 Assembly at Gettysburg and plans will be made to put the Assembly on a permanent financial basis. The old officers were re-elected for the ensuing year, Rev. S. W. Herman of Harrisburg, president; Dr. W. A. Granville and Dr. J. A. Singmaster, vice presidents; Rev. George N. Lanfair of Steelton, secretary, and Rev. J. H. Meyer of Jersey City, treasurer.

The feature of the week that interested every one was the missionary pageant "Christ in America," held on the campus on Wednesday evening. Twenty-five women of the Assembly were dressed in the costumes of various nations of the world in which missions are located and brought reports to the leading character representing Columbia and around the latter the pageant was centered. A large assembly witnessed the pageant.

After it closed Mrs. E. C. Crook delivered an illustrated lecture on "The Children of the World" that proved most interesting and instructive.

License to Battlefield Guides.

The Gettysburg National Park Commission several months ago issued a statement that they would hold examinations of battlefield guides and issue permits to those successfully passing. The Town Council adopted an ordinance this week, noted in another column, recognizing such guides as the commission shall license. The Commission issued a statement Thursday as to applications to secure a license as follows:

The United States Gettysburg Commission will receive applications from competent guides, to secure a license to act as a guide in the National Military Park. Every application must be in writing and have the endorsement of three reputable and responsible citizens of Gettysburg.

30 Per Cent. of Road Bonus Paid.

State Highway Commissioner Cunningham on Thursday began to mail to the supervisors of the townships throughout the State checks to cover 30 per cent. of the bonus due from the State on road tax collected during 1913 and 1914. The recent Legislature appropriated $1,500,000 for this purpose, part of which is now being distributed.

licensed place, in your opinion, is it not more in keeping with the spirit of the Act and more nearly fulfilling the duty of safe-guarding the interests of the public, for the Court to refuse to find a present necessity by reason of the mere fact that a previous necessity existed?

If there be the slightest doubt upon that subject, ought not the Court resolve that doubt against the applicant, rather than against the remonstrants?

Twenty-seventh. In your opinion, is it not the duty of the Court to require applicants for licenses to convince the Court by proper means and proof, that such applicant is a fit man and that such license is necessary? If so, is it not the duty of the Court to welcome the reception of any evidence that may be offered which would show the lack of such fitness or of such necessity?

Is it not likewise the duty of the Court to welcome the reception of any evidence that might create a reasonable doubt as to the fitness of the applicant or of the necessity of the license? If such doubt exists, can it be said that the Court is convinced of the necessity of the license or of the fitness of the applicant?

Twenty-eighth. In your opinion should the Act of 1887 be construed to mean that it is the imperative duty of the Court to grant at least one license in every County of the Commonwealth?

Twenty-ninth. What are your views upon the reasons given by Judge Griswell in refusing to grant all licenses in Venango county appearing in his opinion reported in 58 Superior Court Report at page 277?

Lehigh—the National Cement

A NEW ERA is here—the era of permanent construction—the era of Concrete. In the next decade, city sky-lines will show fewer changes. Factories will show additions rather than replacements. Buildings will stand and serve.

Concrete demonstrated absolutely its wonderful resistance in these recent configurations: the Laison factory, at West Orange, N. J.; the DuPont Motor Car Works, at Dayton, Ohio; the Pacific Coast Dry Goods Company's store at Lafayette St., the great Salem (Mass.) fire, and in scores of other instances.

The time to protect your structure against future rebuilding—against fire—against the ravages of weather—against depreciation—is before you laid.

Choose Concrete—and specify Lehigh—the dependable cement. The word Portland—a general trade name—guarantees nothing. There are over a hundred different brands of cement—all Portland. Yet more than 10% of all the cement sold in the United States is Lehigh.

The name Lehigh is your protection.

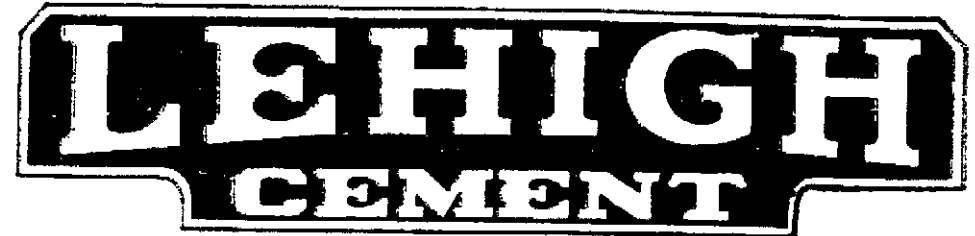

Lehigh Cement has uniform color and fineness and "the strength that increases with age." You know precisely Lehigh in building factories, warehouses, sky-scrapers, homes, garages, roads, bridges, schools, barns, public edifices, etc.

You should investigate the merits of Lehigh Cement Concrete for all construction purposes. Learn about Lehigh Service, with 12 mills located throughout the United States for quick distribution to our customers.

HOW TO MAKE THE PARCEL POST A REAL BOON TO THE FARMER

MISS LOUISE HALL
Member Halifax Grange, Dauphin County.

U.S. COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION ENDORSES VOTES FOR WOMEN

Washington, D. C.—In a recent address before the graduation class of Fairmount Seminary, one of the leading girls' schools of the country, Philander P. Claxton, Commissioner of Education of the United States, predicted the early dawn of woman's suffrage. Students and alumnae from virtually every State in the Union were present and cheered the prediction.

"You might as well stand on a bridge over the Mississippi and with a whisk broom try to sweep back the waters as they rush to the sea," said Dr. Claxton, "as to attempt to stem the tide of public opinion in favor of votes for women. Nothing can stop it."

"The graduating classes of 1915 have greater obligations and greater opportunities than any class ever graduated in this country, because the war in Europe has given America her great opportunity and unless we take the leadership in everything we will be recreant to our duty. The young women graduated this year will have a larger opportunity in the world's work than any graduated before. So it behooves the girl graduates of 1915 to consider their opportunities and obligations very seriously, for with the coming of suffrage they are going to have a great opportunity to help make laws of the future and those laws will be only as just as public sentiment makes them. You young women will have as much to do in the creation of this public sentiment as your brothers."

Dr. Claxton's vigorous endorsement of woman's suffrage has caused much favorable comment in the National Capital, especially on account of the widely representative audience before which it was delivered.

ALIMONY TO MEN

When men talk of the "special privileges" which women enjoy, they commonly think of "alimony" as a privilege enjoyed by the "protected" sex. But records recently compiled show that from the years 1887 to 1906—the period chosen for the study—more than 6,354 men in the United States were regularly receiving alimony from their divorced wives. And they were actual receivers, not merely seekers.

The records show that about 2,000 men asked for alimony but were denied by the courts. It has been estimated that of the women who ask for alimony, only about seventy-two per cent are granted it. It is amusing to note how closely this parallels the experience of the men, for, of the men who asked for alimony, seventy per cent were granted it. Evidently "alimony" is no monopoly of the "helpless" and voteless sex.

President James Madison said: "No such phrase as virtual representation was ever known in law or Constitution."

Woman Member of Halifax Grange Suggests Ways To Protect Perishable Products

TO PREVENT BIG LOSSES

Farmers Now Are At Mercy of Express Companies and Commission Brokers.

By MISS LOUISE HALL

Halifax Grange, Dauphin County.

When the Parcel Post bill was before the National Legislature much was heard of the benefit it would bring to the farmer. Many of those who argued for it declared that it would enable him to compete successfully with the big express companies and that it would be a most direct route of getting goods from the producer to the consumer.

The farmer was told that he would be able to send butter, eggs and chickens direct to the consumer in the city when parcel post came. He tried it. He sent a chicken to his married daughter living in the city. It stayed half a day on the rural postman's foot warmer; then it remained over night in a hot post office; next it traveled several hours in a mail bag and at last reached the farmer's daughter. She hastily wrote her father never to try sending a chicken to anyone outside the family. Next he tried sending some eggs, packing them as the postal authorities directed. They arrived in a state of scramble. He couldn't get damages as he was obliged to send them at his own risk or not at all. And so the farmer had to go back to his patronage of the commission man who sends his goods by express. The express companies thrive on this while the farmer barely makes a small profit.

Now what could the farm women do about this? They are already suggesting that the rural carrier have a light tin box like a small refrigerator on the back of his wagon, out of the sun. The post office might be equipped with good refrigerators, so might the mail cars. All packages bearing certain stamps would be kept in these cool places. This is a matter of public housekeeping and if the farm woman had a vote they could help the farmers bring about these improvements.

Farmers who sell to the commission merchants now get 34 per cent to 40 per cent of the retail price of farm product. The rest goes to the express companies, to the commission brokers and the retail merchants. The parcel post will be of great service to the farmer and to the city buyer when it will undertake to be a means of safe transportation for perishable products.

The reason why the parcel post has not thus far been of the benefit it should to the farmer and his city customer is that there has not been enough political pressure brought to bear to make it so. When the housewives of the city who want the goods which the farmer has and want them at reasonable prices, and the women on the farms can bring their votes to bear upon questions of this sort, they will help the farmer make the parcel post the common carrier it is meant to be. Let the women vote on these questions!

WHITE HOUSE DAUGHTERS STRONG FOR SUFFRAGE

Among the recent occupants of the White House, the younger generation has shown strong interest in woman suffrage.

Miss Margaret Wilson, who, as is well known, takes a keen interest in social questions, is a suffragist, as is her sister, Mrs. Francis B. Sayre.

Miss Helen Taft, who has just graduated at Bryn Mawr, is an advocate of equal suffrage, as were the daughters of ex-President Theodore Roosevelt.

The Misses Cleveland, like their illustrious father, are suffragists and have been taking an active part in suffrage work in Princeton, where they were associated with Miss Hibben, the daughter of the president of the university.

THE HOUSEKEEPER

You have taken my spindle away from me, you have taken away my loom.
You bid me sit in the dust of it, at peace without cloth or broom.
You have shut me still with a sleepy will, with no evil nor good to do.
While our house the World that we keep for God should be garnished and swept anew.

The evil things that have waxed and grown while I sat with my white hands still.
They have meshed our World till they twined and curled through my very window-sill:
Shall I sit and smile at mine ease the while that my house is wrongly kept?
It is mine to see that the house of me is straightened and cleansed and swept!

My daughters strive for their souls alive, harried and starved and cold—
Shall I bear it long, who was swift and strong in guarding them white of old?

My children cry in our house, the World, neglected and hard-oppressed—
Is my right not then to command all men to be still while the children rest?

I who labored beside my mate when the work of the World began.
The watch I kept while my children slept let me keep today by Man:
I have crouched too long by the little hearths at the bidding of Man, my mate—

I rise to kindle the Hearth of the World, that Man has left desolate!

THE AUGUST MAGAZINES

RULES OF LIVING OF A MAN WHO LIVES AT AGE OF 100.

Advice Mothers Should Remember in the Dog Days of August—How to Live to the Age of 100.

In the "Interesting People" department of the August AMERICAN MAGAZINE appears an article about Henry F. Swanback, the oldest Odd Fellow in America, who lives at the age of 100 at Greenwood, Nebraska. Mr. Swanback was a boyhood friend of Blumhark's. His grandfather lived to be 117. Following are his rules for living to be 100:

"Go to bed early and get up early.
"Never sleep in a heated room.
"Sleep out of doors in summer—winter, too, if it can be arranged.
"Drink plenty of fresh water.
"Use very little red liquor.
"As old age comes on take, each morning, a small wine glass of one-third glycerin and two-thirds good whiskey.
"Smoke as often as you please, but do not inhale the smoke, or blow it out through the nostrils.
"If you are unfortunate enough to lose your wife, get another. It is not good for man or woman to live alone.
"Don't worry over anything. Worry kills more people than disease.
"Keep an even temper at all times. Be cheerful at all times.
"Keep the feet dry and the head clear.
"Never eat meat. A little chicken will not harm one, but must not be eaten too often.
"Eat plenty of fresh fish.
"Do not drink coffee.
"Keep away from sweet stuff. It ruins the stomach and kidney.
"Take plenty of outdoor exercise. Walk a great deal.
"Follow these rules, and any normal man, barring accidents, can live to be one hundred."

What Mothers Should Remember.

In the Better Babies department of the August WOMAN'S HOME COMPANION appears the following advice, especially designed for mothers to follow in August:

"The 'dog days' of August are hard on a baby. Keep him as cool as possible, sponging him off with cool water several times a day.

"If you go away to the country, make sure that the sanitary conditions are right; that the milk supply is pure; that you can get the proper kind of food for your baby and small children; and that the house is screened.

"Diarrhea, or 'summer complaint,' is usually caused by unclean milk or the wrong food. If you are sure that your supply of milk is being properly handled and the cows inspected, keep it pure by absolute cleanliness in handling, by rapid cooling, and by keeping it cool and covered until ready for use.

Too frequent feedings sometimes cause diarrhea; feed your baby (under one year of age) regularly every three hours, starting at six o'clock in the morning. During hot weather a baby will not digest as much food as he will in cold weather, and it may be necessary to lessen the strength of the food.

"In case of diarrhea, give one or two teaspoonfuls of castor oil; stop all food for at least twelve to twenty-four hours; give cooled, boiled water without adding any sugar, and immediately call your doctor.
"The dreaded 'second summer' of a baby's life should not be dreaded if his diet is right."

5,200 Cows Can Earn $100 Apiece.

In the current issue of FARM AND FORESIDE, the national farm paper published at Springfield, Ohio, appears an account of a big and successful co-operative movement which is bringing certain Oregon farmers success. In the following brief extract taken from the article appear a few of the most important facts:

"More than 812 million pounds of cheese, valued at $541,748 46, was the output of the 18 farmers' co-operative cheese factories in Tillamook County, Oregon, during 1914. Fifty-two hundred cows, owned by 486 farmers, produced the milk that made this cheese. The average return for every cow, after deducting factory expenses, was nearly $100. This is a remarkable average for 5,200 cows."

The Foliage of Summer.

The foliage of summer is generally mature, green, sober. There is a certain warmth and gaiety about the leaf-progress of June and early July, and a vast variety in shades, as well, so that any body of trees and shrubs of varying kinds will display anything from the youngest light yellow leaves of the Norway maples to the deep, even green of the horse-chestnuts. Toward the first of August, the leaves are quite or nearly fullgrown, and they have settled down to their real work of elaborating food for the trees that bear them.

My water-color friend, Little, has discovered in this color maturity another confirmation of his theory that there is a sort of color compensation, a chromatic balance, of the seasons. In spring, the air and the ground are cool, though slowly absorbing heat, and the leaves and flowers are warm in hue, there are the really hot colors of the tulips, the yellows of some tree blossoms, and so on. As the season warms, the foliage and flower hues become in general cooler, until in summer we have the deep green of mature leaves, the deep blue of the white-dotted sky, and the blue and whites of the garden. When cooler nights begin to come, the summer foliage is likely to assume hints of brown, the corn takes on the colors of maturity, and we have the decidedly warm hued chrysanthemums, purple asters, and the like, to compensate. The sharp weather of winter demands all possible heat from nature's color scheme, and we have it in the browned leaf, following the brilliant and not cool hues of autumn, in the corn-shock and the bare tree stem, and even in the shadows on the snow.—J. Horace McFarland in THE COUNTRY-SIDE MAGAZINE for August.

The Toll of Battle.

War is taking its toll of sport day by day. Wilding has gone, the two Greffels, Captain Edwards, and now John Graham. Graham was the man who Chick Evans declared was the best golfer he saw in England. That is a rather large order, but English critics have agreed as to his prowess. His physique was not robust, which apparently kept him from the top flights in the tournaments, but it did not spare him from the red mill of war. We mention these names only because they bring home to us in America what every community on the other side is feeling a thousand times more keenly. These are the men whose names we knew in an intimate manner and whom many of us have seen on the polo field, the tennis court or the golf links. What has happened in England has happened in greater or lesser degree in every other country now at war. Moloeh claims the youngest and sturdiest, and no nation has balked at the price. A great war shows us the world in the stark simplicity of the older days, with the emphasis laid on the mere brutal fact of existence and the sports and games of peace blossoming into the grimmer game of battle.—August OUTING.

Reginald Pieffer, the 10 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Pieffer of Littlestown fell from a hay wagon on which he was playing and cut a deep gash in his right leg below the knee. The boy was so weakened from the loss of blood that it was necessary to give him ether before the wound could be stitched.

CONDITIONS OF U. S. ARMY

COAST DEFENSE ENTIRELY INADEQUATE.

A New Military System Needed to Effectively Protect This Country.

It has cost Uncle Sam approximately one billion dollars to maintain an army of 90,000 men in constant training during the last ten years, and yet he has a trained force of only 40,000 soldiers actually available for purposes of immediate defense.

It has cost Switzerland, with a population about that of Massachusetts, $5,000,000 in ten years to train an army that can place 500,000 men in the field within a few days if the occasion should require. The expense to Uncle Sam in that period has been $10,000 a man, while the total cost to the Swiss Government has been $130 a man.

These statements showing how expensive our unpreparedness has been are contained in a report of the army committee of the National Security League, of which former Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson is the chairman.

"Without doubt the greatest defensive bulwark of the nation should be formed by our millions of male citizens capable of bearing arms, but in their untrained state they are as powerless to stop an invasion as an undeveloped gold mine in Alaska would be to stop a pain on Wall Street," the committee says. "It is folly to suppose that we can use our citizens against an invader before they have been trained and we must have ready at all times a trained force strong enough to hold the tide of invasion until our raw citizens have been developed into a serviceable product."

The committee says that conditions have undergone a change in the last fifty or one hundred years and declares: "If our volunteers are to be the real war force of the nation they must be protected during their training period by a force already trained that can be speedily mobilized."

The committee records its absolute confidence in the ability, integrity and patriotism of the officers who constitute the General Staff of the Army and adopts without reservation their recommendation for the strength of our trained first line of land defense. The strength of this trained force was fixed by the General Staff at approximately 500,000 men.

"The navy is our first line of defense against an attack from across the seas," the report says. "So long as it is master on the sea there can be little or no danger of successful invasion. Every consideration of national safety demands that the strength and efficiency of the navy shall be so maintained that it may bear its proper share of the defense burden. That it is deficient in ships and personnel is clearly shown by the report of the navy committee of the National Security League."

The committee points out that while a powerful navy is a "mighty agency for peace," it is not sufficient insurance against national disaster in war.

"It is practicable to develop the defensive power of a nation to approximate its maximum energy only through the agency of a land force," it continues. "Our navy force is not an adequate first line and our land forces are not adequate support for the navy. The two combined do not form a bulwark behind which the undeveloped military resources of the country can be converted into military strength. The tide of invasion can break through the weak dam before new material can be had to strengthen it."

The committee says that out of 90,000 men constituting our regular army there are in round numbers only 40,000 remaining in the United States. The others are on garrison duty outside the States. Of this 40,000, 16,000 are coast artillerymen and consequently the only well disciplined force which may be moved to meet an invader is made up of less than 25,000 men, or a little more than twice the New York police force.

The militia, or National Guard, rolls contain approximately 125,000 men, but the committee says not more than half of it is even moderately well trained. Possibly 60,000 militia might be used in an emergency such as an invasion of our shores, and a total force of 85,000 regulars and militia, therefore, constitute "our total defensive mobile force for the protection of many thousands of miles of coast and land frontier."

"A hostile ship that would not dare come within range of the defenses of New York City," it continues, "could land troops with perfect safety a few miles away on the coast of Long Island or New Jersey. The guns in these defenses would be no more powerless to oppose a landing beyond their range if they were located on the most remote island of Alaska."

"These guns can be fired only toward the sea. Without a mobile land force to protect the defenses of our coast cities, they are completely at the mercy of a raiding force that might land on the nearby coast. In other words, the front doors would be barred and guarded, but the back doors would be wide open and undefended to-day."

After comparing the cost of maintaining our army and that of Switzerland the committee says: "Your committee is of the opinion that the American people are not aware that our defensive arrangements are so out of proportion to the vast sums being spent on them, and they need but know the facts to be aroused to the importance of introducing the reforms in our military system repeatedly recommended by the War Department to secure the maximum return for the money expended."

"Guns and ammunition must be provided in time of peace if they are to be available in the opening period of a war," it says.

"Mention has already been made of the inadequate return the nation gets for the money expended on its army. This is due in part to a faulty military system and in part to a political pork barrel system. That the abuses and extravagances of the latter should extend to our military system is the natural consequence of a national executive budget. Before more money is spent on our military forces it should be possible to so reform our methods that we may spend more wisely and economically that which we do spend. So long as the Secretary of War—the man primarily responsible for the efficiency and economical administration of the service—has no hand in the preparation of a budget and no voice to defend such a budget on the floor of the houses of Congress, while the men who find advantage in spending the appropriations in extravagant ways have such a voice as well as a vote, just so long will our national defensive arrangements be woefully out of proportion to the money expended.

"As a first step toward making our military system highly and permanently efficient a budget system should be adopted in our national administration similar to that which exists in substantially all other civilized countries."

Farm Advisers of the State.

The Farm Advisers' work of the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture was begun August 1, 1913, being authorized by a special Act of Assembly passed at the preceding session of the Legislature. The Act made a distinct appropriation for carrying out its provisions for the period ending May 31, 1915.

In accordance with the terms of the Act, the Secretary of Agriculture appointed ten persons, deemed to be "qualified by experience to give instruction in the Science of Agriculture and to demonstrate approved agricultural methods" at such times and places as should be indicated by the calls made for such service.

In order to cover, as nearly as possible, the most important forms of agricultural work, two persons were appointed for giving instruction and demonstrations relating to Soil Improvement and General Crop Production, two persons to give special attention to the subject of Poultry and Poultry Products, two persons assigned to the subject of Animal Husbandry, including the Dairy Industry, and one person to each of the following subjects, viz.: Fruit Growing and Market Gardening, Cooperation in Buying and Selling, Land Drainage and Water Supply, and the subject of Domestic Science.

These appointments were made on the 18th of July 1913, for a period to end with the close of said year from which period the work was continued, by common consent of the Department and those employed, to the end of the period for which the Act provided an appropriation for the support of the work.

The call that was made by the public upon the Department for the services of these instructors as soon as the work was organized, demonstrated the popular opinion as to its importance and the reports of work done by the appointees showed such a marked public interest in the various branches of the work outlined in its organization, as to warrant the inclusion of an item in the General Appropriation made by the last Legislature for its continuance.

Considerable time having elapsed between the date (May 31, 1915) when the availability of the appropriation, carried by the Act authorizing the work, ended, and the final passage and the approval of the General Appropriation Act of 1915, making its continuance possible, the work was suspended, to be taken up after the organization of the Commission of Agriculture, appointed pursuant to the Act of May 18, 1915.

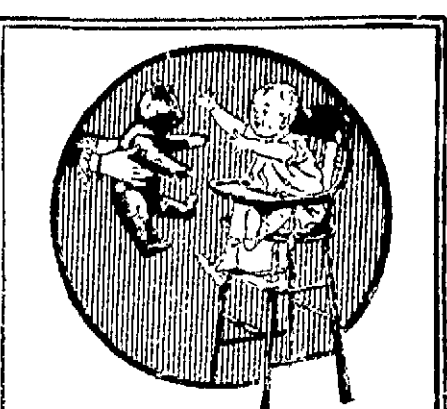

The Commission met at the State Capitol on July 16th and no change having been suggested in relation to Farm Advisers' work, the Secretary of Agriculture announces his intention to again start this branch of work with such changes as seem desirable beginning the first day of August.

The work will be directed from Department Headquarters, so that persons desiring the services of those employed for this branch of the Department's work, will send request to either the Secretary or the Deputy Secretary of Agriculture, at Harrisburg, Pa., stating the line of work concerning which they wish to receive instruction, the probable length of time that will be required, and their willingness to take the Department's representative from, and return him to the most convenient railroad station, naming the place.

Cigarmaking Boom.
The records of the Ninth Internal Revenue District show that there is a big boom on in the cigar industry. During the fiscal year which ended on July 1 of this year fifty million more cigars were manufactured in this district than in the preceding year. The product in the year that has just ended was 60,000,000 cigars while during the year which began July 1, 1913, and ended July 1, 1914, the output was 54,000,000. The gain during the year in the entire State was 10,000,000 cigars, and it will be seen that the Ninth District contributed one-half of this increase while the Second District which comprises the factories of Philadelphia and its suburbs also showed a gain of 50,000,000 cigars.

As further evidence that the industry is booming records have been received at the Lancaster office of the establishment of twenty-seven new factories during the month of June and July. Most of these factories are small, the little dealer establishing a factory in connection with his store. Recently several advertisements have appeared offering employment to cigarmakers and this attests that the bigger factories are enjoying an era of prosperity.

Lancaster and York counties are the manufacturing centers of the Ninth District and there are four hundred factories in Lancaster county while the county across the Susquehanna can boast of approximately one thousand. Pennsylvania heads the list as a cigar manufacturing State with New York second and Ohio and New Jersey following in rapid succession.

A JOINT RESOLUTION

Proposing an amendment to section eight of article nine of the Constitution of Pennsylvania.

Section 1. Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, That the following amendment to the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, in accordance with the provisions of the eighteenth article thereof:—

Amend section eight, article nine of the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, which reads as follows:

"Section 8. The debt of any county, city, borough, township, school district, or other municipality or incorporated district, except as herein provided, shall never exceed seven per centum upon the assessed value of the taxable property therein, nor shall any such municipality or district incur any new debt, or increase its indebtedness to an amount exceeding two per centum upon such assessed valuation of property, without the assent of the electors thereof at a public election in which the debt or debts, which now exceeds seven per centum of the assessed valuation, may be authorized by law to increase the same three per centum, in the aggregate, at any one time, upon such valuation, except that any debt or debts hereinafter incurred by the city and county of Philadelphia for the construction and development of subways for transit purposes, or for the construction of wharves and docks, or the reconstruction of a system of wharves and docks, as public improvements, owned or to be owned by said city and county of Philadelphia, and which shall yield to the city and county of Philadelphia current net revenues in excess of the interest on said debt or debts, and the annual installments necessary for the cancellation of said debt or debts, may be excluded in ascertaining the power of the city and county of Philadelphia to become other-wise indebted. That a sinking fund for the cancellation shall be established and maintained," so that it shall read as follows:—

"Section 8. The debt of any county, city, borough, township, school district, or other municipality or incorporated district, except as herein provided, shall never exceed seven per centum upon the assessed value of the taxable property therein, nor shall any such municipality or district incur any new debt, or increase its indebtedness to an amount exceeding two per centum upon such assessed valuation of property, without the consent of the electors thereof at a public election in such manner as shall be provided by law; but any city, the debt of which on the first day of January, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four, exceeded seven per centum of such assessed valuation, and has not since been reduced to less than such per centum, may be authorized by law to increase the same three per centum in the aggregate, at any one time, upon such valuation. The city of Philadelphia, upon the conditions hereinafter set forth, may increase its indebtedness to the extent of three per centum in excess of seven per centum upon such assessed valuation for the specific purpose of providing for all or any of the following purposes:—to wit: For the construction and improvement of subways, tunnels, railways, elevated railways, and other transit facilities for the construction and improvement of wharves and docks and for the reclamation of land to be used in the construction of wharves and docks, owned or to be owned by said city. Such increase, however, shall only be made with the assent of the electors thereof at a public election, to be held in such manner as shall be provided by law. In ascertaining the borrowing capacity of said city of Philadelphia, at any time, there shall be excluded from the calculation the debt for the construction and improvement of wharves and docks, or for the reclamation of land, for any one or more of the specific purposes hereinafter enumerated shall be yielding to said city an annual current net revenue; the amount of which credit shall be ascertained by capitalizing the annual net revenue during the year immediately preceding the time of such ascertainment. Such capitalization shall be accomplished by ascertaining the principal amount which would yield such annual, current net revenue, at the average rate of interest, and sinking-fund charges payable upon the indebtedness incurred by said city for such purposes, up to the time of such ascertainment. The method of determining such amount, so to be excluded or allowed as a credit, may be prescribed by the General Assembly.

In incurring indebtedness, for any one, or more of said purposes of construction, improvement, or reclamation, the city of Philadelphia may issue its obligations maturing not later than fifty years from the date thereof, with provision for a sinking fund sufficient to retire said obligation at maturity, the payments to such sinking fund to be in equal or graded annual installments. Such obligations may be in amount sufficient to provide for and may include the amount of the interest and sinking-fund charges accruing and which may accrue thereon throughout the period of construction and until the expiration of one year after the completion of the work for which said indebtedness shall have been incurred; and said city shall not be required to levy a tax to pay said interest and sinking-fund charges, as required by section ten of article nine of the Constitution of Pennsylvania, until the expiration of said period of one year after the completion of such work.

Section 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same, That the following is proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, in accordance with the provisions of the eighteenth (XVIII) article thereof:—

Knocked into Creek.

When a Ford struck a buggy while going over the Conewago bridge near New Oxford Sunday evening, Charles W. Baker of that place, well known here as a student at college, was thrown off the bridge wall and into the creek. He was not hurt. Mr. Baker was sitting on the wall with several friends when the accident occurred. He fell about ten feet and landed in eighteen inches of water. The buggy lost a wheel and the Ford was slightly damaged.

Signs Removed.

Along all roads entering this place hundreds of signs have been removed within the past week in accordance with the policy of the State Highway Department. The Gettysburg Battle Park Commission has given orders in conformity with this policy along the highways they have built within the battlefield limits and all signs are being removed along these roads and where the advertising was painted on the fence it is being painted over with a color corresponding to the color of fence. The tourist coming to Gettysburg will see nothing to distract from the great natural beauty of our country.

Broke Parole.

Arthur Douglas, a colored resident of Gettysburg, must go back to the Eastern Penitentiary to complete his seven year sentence because he broke the terms of the parole on which he was released. Chief of Police Emmons furnished to the Baltimore authorities the information leading to his arrest. One of the terms of the parole was that he should not leave this State without permission. This Douglas has done on several occasions. He has three years more to serve.

A New Model Typewriter!

The No. 9 OLIVER
The Standard Visible Writer

BUY IT NOW!

Yes, the crowning typewriter triumph is here!

It is just out—and comes years before experts expected it. For makers have striven a lifetime to attain this ideal machine. And Oliver has won again, as we scored when we gave the world its first visible writing.

There is truly no other typewriter on earth like this new Oliver "9." Think of touch so light that the tread of a kitten will run the keys!

CAUTION!

The new-day advances that come alone on this machine are all controlled by Oliver. Even our own previous models—famous in their day—never had the Optional Duplex Shift.

It puts the whole control of 84 letters and characters in the little fingers of the right and left hands. And it lets you write them all with only 28 keys, the least to operate of any standard typewriter made.

THIS WRITERS OF ALL OTHER MACHINES CAN IMMEDIATELY RUN THE OLIVER NUMBER "9" WITH MORE SPEED AND GREATER EASE.

Palmer Stays in Politics.

Hon. A. Mitchell Palmer will remain the National Democratic Committeeman from Pennsylvania, having declined the place on the U. S. Court of Claims to which he was appointed by President Wilson. He has made public the following statement:

"I have concluded not to accept the place on the Court of Claims Bench to which the president appointed me some time ago. At the time of my appointment I told the president that I would need two or three months in which to settle up my personal, political and professional matters before taking up the work of the court. For that reason I have not taken the oath of office. This was quite agreeable to the other judges because the court is in vacation from early in May until October and my absence from the bench did not therefore affect their work. Since returning home I have found it more difficult than I anticipated to give up by personal and professional matters. My roots are down too deep in the ground and I am too much of a going concern to suddenly cut off my activities by the acceptance of a place for life on the federal bench. While I have deeply appreciated the honor which was done me by the president in naming me for a place on this high court, I cannot, in justice to myself, accept it. Many clients both old and new have asked me to look after their legal work and I have already undertaken obligations of this character from which it is difficult, if not impossible for me to withdraw."

Rev. E. E. Snyder Marries.

Snyder—Forrer.—The marriage of Miss Nora Irene Forrer of Harrisburg to the Rev. Edgar Ernest Snyder, pastor of St. Matthew's Lutheran Church, took place in the Lutheran Church of the Redeemer in Harrisburg last week. The ring ceremony was used by the Rev. E. Victor Roland, the officiating clergyman. The bride wore an attractive gown of embroidered organdie, with lace trimmings and carried a bouquet of sweet peas and maiden fern. She was attended by her sisters, Miss Edna Viola Forrer and Miss Helen Pearl Forrer. After a wedding breakfast at the home of the bride, the couple departed on an extended wedding trip to Buffalo, Niagara, Toronto, Thousand Isles, Montreal, Lake Champlain, Lake George, Northfield, Mass., and New York. The bride is a graduate of the Central High School and the bridegroom of Gettysburg College and Seminary. "Heine" Snyder was always a leader in athletics while at college and popular with the student body and in town.

Changes in Mother's Pension Law.

Auditor General A. W. Powell has apportioned the appropriation made by the last Legislature toward Mothers' pensions in the various counties. The Act of 1915 provided for an apportionment based on population and for the two years ending May 31, 1917, Adams county will receive from the State for mothers' pensions $1,023.75. A like sum is provided by the county, so that for a period of one year there will be but $1,023.75 available for pensions.

The Act of 1915 changes the beneficiaries to a certain extent. The Act of 1913 provided relief for "indigent, widowed or abandoned mothers for partial support" of their children in their homes" and under that law the Attorney General held that a pension could not be paid to a mother whose husband was confined in an insane asylum. The new Act of 1915 does not provide for abandoned mothers, but says the pension shall be made to "women who have children under sixteen years of age and whose husbands are dead or permanently confined in institutions for the insane, when such women are of good repute, but poor and dependent on their own efforts for support as aid in supporting their children in their own homes."

Work on Taneytown Road.

Road Superintendent Wm. B. Flemming has received notice from the State Highway Department that $6000 has been set aside for repairs and improvements to the Taneytown road for a distance of six miles to the Maryland line. More men will be employed and the work started on this road at once. The road will be crowned, gutters cleaned out, bridges built and drain pipes placed and it will be made one of the best dirt roads in this section. It will connect at the State line with a new road being built from Taneytown and at latter point the new macadam from Westminster to Taneytown is reached. It will be a most useful road as many farmers and people use it.

Store Changes Hands.

S. E. Trimmer, proprietor of the Five and Ten Cent Store corner of Baltimore and Middle streets, opposite the Court House has sold his entire stock of goods to his brother, Jacob E. Trimmer of Carlisle. Stock is now being taken. S. E. Trimmer has been conducting the business for over five years, having opened the store April 1910. He has built up a large trade. The new proprietor has been in the same business for many years and is successfully operating stores at Carlisle, Mechanicsburg and Shippensburg, and the Gettysburg store will be another link in his chain of stores. The transfer of the store will be made without any interruption in the business. W. C. Trimmer, another brother, will be the new manager and has leased a house on Chambersburg street and will move here with his family. Mr. S. E. Trimmer will continue to reside here.

Collaboration For a Picture Play

It Leads to Something More Real Than Photographs

By F. A. MITCHEL

"Oh, Mr. Fielding, I'm so glad you have come!"

"And why, may I ask, are you glad that I have come?" The gentleman's eyes lighted with pride and pleasure.

"Because I have use for you. You're just the person in all the world I have wished for this morning."

Mr. Fielding's countenance fell. But Miss Meriweather was so eager, so vivacious, so evidently absorbed in a dominant idea, that at heart he said half reproachfully:

"I am disappointed. I hoped your pleasure at my coming was disinterested."

"Don't be silly. I have received an important proposition."

"Show me the man that I may kill him."

"You mean thank him. I anticipate no end of pleasure from the opportunity he has given me."

"And I no end of pain."

"There you go again. Now listen to me. It has been proposed to us—any of us here at Wildwood—to make a scenario for a picture play, be the performers if we like, our house and grounds to be used for the scenes. Now you know why I am so glad you have come. It is because you are a literary man and can make the scenario."

"You mean an apology for a scenario. Well, I'll do the best I can for you—that is, I'll help you to construct the scenario. With such a palatial house and grounds, we must make it a high grade serial, play. I must look up a theme."

"I can't wait for you to look up a theme. I wish to begin right off."

"Suppose we take for our motif a runaway match?"

"The very thing!"

"It's not new, but picture plays are more dependent upon the scenery, the attractiveness of the actors and actresses and all that than the novelty of the theme. With this residence, grounds and, above all, your own sweet self for the heroine, any sort of play must be a success."

"Just think—to be a heroine! And she clapped her hands gleefully."

"To begin," continued Mr. Fielding, "you, being the leading lady?"

"You mean the heroine."

"You being the heroine, we'll call you Sophia Waterman."

"My favorite name for a heroine is Constance Maltravers."

"Very well, you are Constance Maltravers, in love with—whom shall we have you in love with?"

"Do you mean really in love with or only for the play?"

"For the play, of course."

"You know so much more about stage matters than any of the rest of us that I think you had better take the part yourself."

This was said haltingly and with eyes bent on the floor.

"We will not, of course, use our own names. I must have another. How would Enoch Rogers do?"

"It wouldn't do at all. I like Howard Mortimer much better."

"Howard Mortimer it is. Howard Mortimer, being in love with Constance Maltravers and her father being a grim curmudgeon."

"Is it necessary to make papa that?"

"Oh, no. He may simply wish for you to marry a prominent politician who, though younger than himself, is his intimate friend."

Miss Meriweather looked up at Mr. Fielding with an expression he understood, though another would not have.

"And who is to play that part?" she asked, after a long pause.

"The gentleman him—I mean Mr. Cogswell, perhaps, might."

"Mr. Cogswell would do no such thing—that is, if the heroine is to marry Howard Mortimer."

"I never thought of that. We must find some one else."

"Perhaps I can persuade Mr. Cogswell to take the part."

"And give place to Mortimer at the end of the play?"

"I don't know. Is that necessary?" Mr. Fielding smiled.

"Why couldn't that be left till later?" asked Miss Meriweather.

"I was not aware," replied Mr. Fielding, with a slight haughtiness, "that a woman who is so deeply in love that she is about to defy her parents by running away with a man would have any doubt as to what man she intends to run away with."

"Mightn't she change her mind at the last minute?"

"That is a feature of realism which would be difficult to work into our play, considering the theme. It would be incongruous."

"I suppose we will have to leave Mr. Cogswell out."

"Whom would you put in his place?"

"Mack Gregory would play the part well if he could be induced to assume it."

Mr. Fielding frowned. In Mr. Gregory he recognized another of Miss Meriweather's admirers. He changed his tactics.

"Mr. Gregory," he said, "has not the personnel for any prominent part. He is too dumpy."

"Mack is not dumpy at all," replied Miss Meriweather; "he is very symmetrical."

"His nose would not photograph well. It's too long. You see, in photographing an object, the nearer it is to the camera the larger it is. Gregory's nose photographed facing the camera would look like an elephant's trunk."

"Do you really think so?"

"I know it."

"Who else is there we can get for the part?"

"It seems to me that if the heroine doesn't know her own mind we'd better put off making the scenario till she finds out which way the wind blows."

"Is she a weathercock?" reproachfully.

"She may be what she likes in real life. When she goes on the boards she must follow the dramatic laws."

"What are the dramatic laws?"

"The one that especially pertains to this theme is that the leading lady must be desperately in love with the leading gentleman."

"Doesn't the leading gentleman have to be desperately in love with the leading lady too?"

"Certainly, but I can't see how he can act his part to advantage if he thinks she doesn't know whether she loves him or not. Besides, her uncertainty would spoil the play. At the last minute, when the audience is expecting to see her run out of this door, flit along the piazza to the porte-cochere, to run away with the leading gentleman, she might be descending a ladder at the back window to make off with the villain. That would make a pretty mess of it."

"How ridiculous!"

"I should think so."

"Why," she asked after a pause, "couldn't the heroine be photographed first running along the piazza to get into a car with the hero and then descending a ladder from a back window to run away with his rival? Then during the performance she could make up her mind which suitor she wanted, and the scene to correspond with her decision could be used. When I read a story or see a play I never like to know which way it's going to turn out. It seems to me our play would be much more interesting my way than the other way. The audience wouldn't know who was going to win."

Mr. Fielding's eyes were bent on Miss Meriweather's face with ill concealed wonder while she promulgated this suggestion. When she had finished she looked up at him and, noting his expression, asked him what caused it.

"Wonder that such a marvelous advance in the dramatic art should have remained hidden from dramatists for so many centuries. Who would have thought that a girl of today should have made such a discovery?"

"Are you speaking ironically?"

"Permit me to withdraw from collaborating with one whose ideas are so far above mine that I could never reach them and would therefore never be in accord with them."

He rose, shook down his trousers and gave his coat a hitch, as if to retire.

"Sit down," said Miss Meriweather. "I don't think you quite understand me. Perhaps it would be better for one of these gentlemen whom I have suggested to take the part of a rival."

"A villain?"

"What you like, rival or villain. Perhaps we can agree better if Mr. Cogswell, for instance, should take the leading part and you take the part of the villain."

"If you mean the rival, I would say that a real rival might be inspired to act the part better than one who does not consider himself worthy to."

"To what?"

"Unless the heroine's shoes."

A prolonged silence.

"It seems to me," said Miss Meriweather, "that we have spent a lot of time without getting anywhere. Suppose we begin. If you are to act the part of my lover it seems to me that you should be getting used to act lover-like toward me. I have noticed that lovers in picture plays give each other real kisses. Must we do that?"

Mr. Fielding brightened up. He assured Miss Meriweather that they must do everything that professional actors and actresses do in picture plays, and he proceeded to practice a lover's bearing toward his ladylove by drawing very near her. Then he took her hand and a few minutes later stole an arm around her dainty waist.

"I wonder if I can have the face to be photographed in this position," said Miss Meriweather doubtfully.

"I think that if we remain awhile in this position you will become so accustomed to it that you will not mind the camera."

The latter portion of the rehearsal came in after he had made real love to her, asked her to be his wife and she had accepted him. The kiss was never better performed in the most artistic photographic production.

As to the collaboration for a picture play, that is in embryo. But so much time is taken up in rehearsing lovers' parts that it is questionable if the scenario will ever be finished. Meanwhile it has got out that a pair of real society lovers are collaborating in the construction of a picture play in which they will take the leading parts themselves, and multitudes are waiting for the opening performance.

But those who knew avert that the picture play will never be constructed. Some declare that Miss Meriweather had been angling for some time for Mr. Fielding, who was considered a great catch; that no proposition whatever for a picture play had been made to her, and that she devised the scheme for the purpose of bringing him to terms. At any rate, the announcement of their engagement will soon be made.

Fire Lands.

The phrase "fire lands" originated in a passage of early history, which also gave rise to the term "western reserve." After the Revolutionary war, when the colonies consented to cede their claims to western lands to congress, Connecticut reserved from her cession a tract embracing a large part of northern Ohio. The tract thus reserved included the present counties of Trumbull, Geauga, Portage and Ashland and became known as the western reserve. It was settled chiefly by emigrants from Connecticut and was sometimes called New Connecticut. In promoting the settlement of the land Connecticut reserved half a million acres from the western end of the tract for bestowal upon her citizens who had suffered losses during the war, and the lands embraced in this special reserve were called "sufferers' lands" and later "fire lands," because most of the sufferers had been losers by fire. In early times the phrase "fire lands" was sometimes used in deeds in describing the location of land in the tract referred to. — Philadelphia Press.

Love of Money.

The love of money can hardly be the root of all evil, for it is only one perverse passion out of many. But there is a kind of decorum about money which makes the love of it peculiarly dangerous, since it conceals from the lover the nature and effects of his passion. If a man wants too much food, he is evidently greedy. If a woman wants too many clothes, she is evidently vain. But money is not a thing, like clothes or food, that can be enjoyed by itself. It is only a means of getting things that can be enjoyed, and so greed for money is not a direct greed, but indirect. It is a civilized means of conducting the struggle for life, which to a great extent conceals from those who use it the ugliness and the animal nature of that struggle. It is, in fact, a kind of diplomacy, politely conducted, behind which there is war. But the diplomats often do not see the war. — London Times.

Chesterfield on Toothbrushes.

When did the English first adopt the toothbrush habit? In "Esmond" Thackeray makes Lord Castlewood spend "a tenth part of his day in the brushing of his teeth and the oiling of his hair," and in doing so the novelist commits a double anachronism. During the first half of the eighteenth century all fine gentlemen wore wigs and had no use for oil on their hair, while the toothbrush was so late as 1754 unknown to Lord Chesterfield. Writing to his son, Chesterfield says: "I hope you take great care of your mouth and teeth, and that you clean them well every morning with a sponge and tepid water, with a few drops of arquebuse water dropped into it. I do insist upon your never using those sticks, or any hard substance whatever, which always rub away the gums and destroy the whiteness of the teeth." — London Graphic.

Porpoise Jaw Oil.

Practically all the porpoise oil used in this country, even if not in the world, for lubricating watches and other delicate instruments is made near New Bedford, Mass., which many years ago was important as a whaling port. The product is taken from the jaw and certain other parts of the animal, which is caught especially for this purpose. When the industry was in its infancy whalers were depended upon to supply the porpoise, but now the manufacturers maintain a fishing department, which follows the schools of porpoise migrating along the coast and furnishes a continual supply of them. The history of the New Bedford industry reaches back to the early part of the nineteenth century to a watch tinker who regulated and cleaned the timepieces of the whalers. — Popular Mechanics.

He Taught Him.

Tells from the nursery brought the mother, who found the baby gleefully pulling small Billy's curls.

"Never mind, darling," she comforted. "Baby doesn't know how it hurts."

Half an hour later wild shrieks from the baby made her run again to the nursery.

"Why, Billy," she cried. "What is the matter with the baby?"

"Nothing, muzzler," said Billy calmly. "Only now he knows!" — Harper's Weekly.

The Dragon Seal

Its Mystery and Its Solution.

By CLARISSA MACKIE

turos of his family, the brandy bottle and the quinine, the straw toys and his one clean shirt and made a package, which he belted around his chest under his clothing. He cooked and ate an enormous quantity of rice and fish; then he threw himself into his hammock and slept heavily until 10 o'clock.

He shook himself into wakefulness, slung a jug of cold tea from his shoulder and went into the garden.

In one hand he carried a large bath sponge tied to a strong stick. In the other hand he carried a bottle of chloroform. At the nearest gate he paused and looked through at the outstretched form of the jungle cat. She was accustomed to Mason's presence there and did not even stir. With steady hands he soaked the big sponge with chloroform—the bottle was large, and the sponge was dripping.

He stepped forward and pressed it close to the nose and mouth of the sleeping tigress. She stirred and, as if enjoying the unaccustomed sensation, grasped the sponge in her huge paws and muzzled it sleepily. She did not even stir when Mason squeezed a heavy duck bag through the pallings and tossed it over her head.

He hastened to the gate at the end of the garden and performed the same operation with the fiercer male beast.

His hands were trembling now, for he must make haste. He could not hope that the anaesthetic would do more than stupefy the beasts for awhile. There was not enough of it, and the conditions were not favorable.

"Just ten minutes—give me ten minutes' start and I'll take my chances with sharks rather than stay here another minute!" he muttered savagely.

The garden gate opened, and he stepped over the inert form of the striped guardian.

He slipped and slid down the muddy bank until he reached the water's edge. The full moon guided him to the group of fishing boats drawn up on the beach. In a moment he had pushed off from shore and was pulling his frail craft into the track of moonlight that led to freedom.

Off to the southeast there showed a faint light—some northbound steamer. So fearful was he that he might miss the precious opportunity and so absorbed was he in the management of the strange boat that Mason failed to notice the ominous silence that brooded over the waters; the shuddering, heaving sound of the oily waves.

Suddenly the moon was blotted out by a swift onrush of dark clouds and the hot breath of the wind.

Surely death stared him in the face. It was riding now on the wings of the approaching typhoon.

And all the while that red light bobbed and disappeared, and now the steamer showed a blessed green light. He could see them alternately—port and starboard. She had changed her course and was coming before the wind, straight toward the tiny sampan tipping up and down on the swell.

One minute after Mason had been rescued by the great ocean liner the typhoon struck with shrieking force.

Perhaps the tidal wave that followed tossed the sampan back on its native shore; perhaps the hungry wave leaped the embankment and tore away Mason's hut and the snarling guardians. He never knew. He never cared.

They put him in a cabin and gave him what he asked for—hot water and soap and clean garments—and he cared not for fifty typhoons. He was back among civilized people. He was free from that mysterious imprisonment.

A year later he had almost forgotten it. He was back in New Hampshire, going daily to his business in Concord. His family welcomed him home as one from the grave, and his children played with the straw toys he had bought from the street vender.

Albert Mason had other troubles now. Business was bad, and bankrupt investments had depleted his assets. The years he had wasted in the hut on the China sea had undermined his prosperity.

He went home and talked it over with his wife, a helpmate indeed. They smiled at the children playing on the floor. The youngest brought a broken toy to his father. It was one of the straw animals Mason had brought home from China.

"The frog and the cat and the bird are quite well," said the baby earnestly, "but my dragon feels very sick."

"The dragon, eh?" repeated Mason, examining the hollow interior of the curly tailed, red fanged toy. "I don't wonder. Molly, look at that!"

He withdrew his fingers and dangled before his wife's amazed eyes a golden chain, from which hung a magnificent circle clasp of jade set with diamonds and rubies, the insignia of some Chinese military official. And carried on the face of the jade was the deep cut figure of a dragon inclosed in a seal.

"The dragon!" he muttered dazedly. "You were carrying it all the time."

"You wife added, 'It must have been within the toy when you purchased it. What a mystery it all is!'"

"Some one has palmed off incriminating evidence upon me," laughed Mason. "I'll write to Wayne in Shanghai and see if there is any chance of finding the owner. If there isn't—well, Mason & Co. will continue to do business, Harrah!"

Two months afterward came Wayne's letter, from which it quoted: "Impossible to trace. China has turned over, you know. Mandarins have succeeded, been assassinated and others exiled. You better keep it as a reward for your time of imprisonment."

"But I wouldn't go through the expense again for double the price," said Mason grimly.

Mason tilted back in his chair and stared across the China sea, where a passing steamer slid through the oily waters. The little whitewashed hut with its tiny veranda facing the sea and its bit of garden looked like a dozen others of its kind which formed the muddy little Chinese village.

Albert Mason had lived there ever since the late uprising. He had become separated from his tourist party and, to his own great amazement, discovered himself a prisoner on a pirate-looking craft which fled before the wind at night and lay hidden in obscure harbors during the day.

One day the junk had nosed into the soft mud of the Chekiang shore, and Mason had been conducted to the little hut.

"Here," said his captor, a bland looking, cold eyed Celestial, "here you stay, thief of the world, until you give up the dragon."

"Dragon?" echoed Mason, hearing for the first time the charge against him. "Do you believe that I've kidnapped part of your menagerie?"

The official shrugged his shoulders, and his companion pulled his sleeve, speaking in Chinese, which of course Mason did not understand.

"Let the foreign devil stay here awhile enjoying his own company. Soon he will disgorge."

"He may escape," said the other cautiously.

"He will not," said the villainous looking captain. "He cannot go beyond the confines of his own garden. The place is guarded night and day."

So Mason stood on the veranda of the hut and watched the junk go teetering away to the dim north whence they had come.

He never forgot that first evening when, after he had eaten fish and rice and drunk tea, he had stepped on the veranda.

He walked down the path to the end of the garden and looked at the moon. Why not escape tonight—or must he wait until his guards relaxed their vigilance and then make the effort?

"Now or never," he muttered and pressed against the gate that opened upon the muddy bank above the restless waves.

The gate resisted his efforts—it was as if some great weight held it closed. Then came a bloodcurdling growl, and there stepped into the moonlit space before the stockade a huge striped form with eyeballs like flame and a breath like pestilence.

Mason fled to the other gate, and again he met the daunting eyes and the jungle smell.

Men guarded him by day; a man eating tiger and his mate kept watch by night.

Like a madman he flew into the house and locked the doors.

A year and a day passed, and the captain of the junk came and asked him if he would give up the dragon. And Mason, raving with anger, bitterly refused, although he knew not what the man meant. And the captain smiled and went away.

And now two years and two days had passed and the junk had not made its second visit to the prisoner.

His position was a singular one. He was innocent of having broken any law of the country—of having committed any crime. In his baggage there was not a single thing that he had not brought from home, except a few toys, grotesque straw animals, gayly colored, which he had purchased from an insistent street vender. The very next day he had been trapped with some hand luggage and spirited away from Shanghai.

"It's a case of mistaken identity," he told himself over and over again as he restlessly ramped the garden paths, envying the freedom of the birds swarming in space and the fishermen off shore.

Back home there, in New Hampshire, his wife and children were mourning him as dead. It was an agonizing thought.

He went to his worn traveling bags and listlessly turned over the contents. There was little clothing left. That which he wore was in tatters. There were pictures of his family, his case of medicine for an emergency, the straw toys—that was all. His trunks, if unclaimed, were still in Shanghai.

The medicines were getting low. He had been obliged to take most of the quinine pills during his frequent attacks of chills and fever. There was a little brandy left—he was saving that for some great emergency—and two unopened bottles of chloroform. These were tightly sealed with wax, and the contents appeared to be inviolate. He had brought it to use when adding to his collection of lepidoptera, but his cases and his butterfly nets and his pins and other paraphernalia were in the trunks.

Chloroform, a willing servant, he missed, his dark thoughts running on, eliminating himself from his horrid existence.

And then, like a lightning flash revealing unsuspected avenues of escape, came the idea.

The remainder of the day he was agoniously excited. He took the pho-

Camp Sanitation.

Every fisherman, the hunter and lover of Nature who turns to camp life should constitute himself a health officer for his own protection and comfort.

There are certain niceties of camp life which an experienced woodsman does not neglect but the city bred amateur who is used to daily garbage collection and open plumbing seems apt to lack sufficient ingenuity to properly improvise means to make up for the lack of these essentials.

Cooking and eating out of doors is an attraction if the process is not accompanied by swarms of flies and these are sure to appear if the wastes are not properly disposed of.

If your camp is near a stream go far enough back to be sure that heavy rains will not wash refuse into the stream, burn or dig a pit for it. Cover all the waste which goes into it with a sprinkling of chlorinated lime and then with a light covering of earth. This will insure a freedom from fly breeding and noisome odors in the hot weather.

Be careful of your water supply. If it is from a stream and there are other camps or dwellings upon it it is far wiser to boil all that is used for drinking and domestic purposes than to risk the possibility of typhoid fever. If a spring is used care should be taken that this is not open to contamination from washings of refuse or other pollutions.

If mosquitoes abound for the sake of comfort and as a protection against the possibility of malarial infection, screens or netting should be used if conditions will permit and if not some anti-mosquito wash should be used such as oil of citronella. If bitten a mixture of one part of aqua-ammonia and three parts of spirits of camphor will destroy the poison. By no means all species of mosquitoes are disease carriers but they are all comfort destroyers.

These precautions are simple enough and if made a part of the regular routine of camp life they will afford a reasonable protection to the health of the occupants of the camp and may likewise serve to protect other pleasure seekers along the streams as well as the regular consumers of water for domestic use. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work.
